ONCE NOTED FIGHTER RETIRES ON AGE LIMIT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—Rear Admiral Raymond P. Rodgers, a conscientious flier in the navy, was placed on the retired list today at the age of 50. Admiral Rodgers was born in the District of Columbia and is a son of the late Rear Admiral Raymond Rodgers. After graduating from Annapolis in 1883 he served for some years on the European station. Subsequently he saw service with the Pacific fleet. From 1879 until 1882 he was an instructor at the naval academy and during the next two years so well connected with the Bureau of Navigation.

From 1882 until the beginning of the war with Spain Admiral Rodgers then a lieutenant commander served as United States naval attaché successively at Paris, St. Petersburg and Madrid. He was on the battleship force during the naval operations in Cuban waters in 1898 and was advanced five numbers for distinguished service in the battle off Santiago.

After the Spanish war Admiral Rodgers served for a time on the Asiatic station and later as a member of the general staff. For the past two years he has been president of the Naval War College at Newport. Other officers advanced to admiral rank during the battle against the Spanish were Adm. Charles W. Moore, admiral in command. Consequently his retirement does not create a vacancy in the list of rear admirals.

MICHIGAN COMPENSATION LAW

State Will Enact Legislation to Protect Workmen.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 20.—The report of the Michigan employers' and workmen's compensation commission is practically complete and ready for the consideration of Gov. Gobomor. The commission has been guided largely in its labors by the employees' liability laws of the states of Washington, Massachusetts and Wisconsin, in each of which the statute has been tested and declared constitutional by the supreme courts.

Secretary Drake of the commission says that nearly all the employers favor the law, which has the support of the labor unions. As matters now stand, it is alleged that the average employer spends more in lawyers' fees and court costs in fighting damage suits than he would pay out in settling all valid claims on a reasonable basis.

Municipal Xmas. Trees.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 20.—Some critical people denounce as "socialistic" Mayor Shank's latest project, which is to supply Christmas trees at cost, but his honor the mayor has gone right ahead and expects to dispose of several carloads of near-free trees in Indianapolis during the next three days.

I ask my customers and friends to forgive me that I close at 6 o'clock, but myself and clerks are worn out by that time. Goods go fast. We sell too cheap. R. Ritter, Mesquite street 308. 12-19-20
